Meet Cheris Hodges:

Romance author Cheris Hodges, www.thecherishodges.com, has been telling stories since she was a child. When she discovered that writing down the fantastic things she and her friends wanted to do kept them out of trouble, she was bit hard by the writing bug.

In 2003, Cheris published her first romance novel, Revelations. Her novels have the flair of the new South, often set in cities like Atlanta, Charlotte and Charleston. The native of South Carolina and current North Carolina resident, said that she wanted her books to reflect her love of southern culture.

Cheris's novel, Just Can't Get Enough, was released by Kensington Books in 2007. RT Book Reviews said:

Hodges' latest is a combination of the down-to-earth and the dramatic, with protagonists whose capacity for love and selflessness make them worth reading about.

Publisher's Weekly has said Cheris creates "believable, three-dimensional characters."

In a starred review of her novel, Rumor Has It, the first book in the Rumor series, PW said, Hodges (Love After War) infuses this contemporary with complex and vivid love, friendship, and loyalty.

Cheris has written 29 novels, including the upcoming, Strategic Seduction, the final book in the Goings family and friends series. She's written for Genesis Press, Kensington Books and Harlequin Romance.

She is also a former sports reporter with The Charlotte Post. Her time covering the Carolina Panthers inspired her novel, Let's Get It On. Cheris created the beloved Maurice Goings, a star wide receiver, and her readers have told her that she'd better not touch him.

Cheris loves a happily ever after, but she takes her characters through a lot to get them there. Readers enjoy Cheris's bad guys as well as her heroes. The online book club, Building Relationships Around Books, awarded Robert Montgomery from Rumor Has It and I Heard A Rumor the best villain award in 2016.

She was also voted Romance Writer of the year in 2016 by AAMBC, which stands for African Americans on the Move Book Club.
